COUNTRY FOCUS

Nicaragua

Stewarding the Private Sector for Family Planning

This month's country focus showcases how the Nicaragua's Disponibilidad Asegurada de Insumos Anticonceptivos committee - found across Latin America to promote contraceptive security - convened private and public sector actors to discuss challenges facing the family planning sector and how to increase private sector involvement. This dialogue led to the creation of joint goals for better public-private coordination and joint strategies aimed at increasing family planning use.

This brief reflects on the project's implementation to highlight the top lessons, disclosing that an intermediary that networks numerous small private providers can address the problem of fragmentation and can serve a range of other value-add functions.
- 5. Integrating private health facilities in government-led health systems: a case study of the public-private mix approach in Ethiopia. This paper notes that increased trust and better working relationships between the Ethiopian government and private health facilities had evolved slowly over time, partly a result of persistent advocacy between the Ministry of Health and relevant stakeholders to create a more positive and trustworthy partnership.

GOVERNANCE BEHAVIOUR SPOTLIGHT

Foster Relations

Towards better engagement of the private sector in health service delivery. The WHO's Health Systems Governance Unit together with the WHO region for Africa and the WHO region for the Eastern Mediterranean undertook a joint landscaping to better understand current approaches to engage with the private sector in health, and governance of the private sector in health, with examples drawn from across Africa. While healthcare federations have emerged on the health landscape and have assumed a central interlocutor function, there were concerns voiced that federations did not always reflect sectoral interests.

> This search was conducted in select databases; private sector included both for-profit and not-for-profit entities.
